HOUSES IN MULTIPLE OCCUPATION

The 2004 Housing Act, introduces the licensing of Houses in Multiple Occupation (HMOs). It will be compulsory to license larger, higher-risk HMOs. Councils will also be able to license other types of HMO to tackle problems in these smaller properties.

What is an HMO ?

HMO stands for House in Multiple Occupation, which means a building, or part of a building, such as a flat, that:

- is occupied by more than one household and where more than one household shares – or lacks – an amenity, such as a bathroom, toilet or cooking facilities
- is occupied by more than one household and which is a converted building – but not entirely self-contained flats (whether or not some amenities are shared or lacking)
- is converted self-contained flats, but does not meet as a minimum standard the requirements of the 1991 Building Regulation, and at least one third of the flats are occupied under short tenancies.

The building is occupied by more than one household:

- as their only or main residence
- as a refuge for people escaping domestic violence

- by students during term time
- for other purposes prescribed by the government.

A household is:

- families (including single people, couples and same sex couples)
- other relationships, such as fostering, carers and domestic staff.

Why does the government want HMO's to be licensed ?

Larger HMOs, such as bedsits and shared houses, often have poorer physical and management standards than other privately rented properties. The people who live in HMOs are amongst the most vulnerable and disadvantaged members of society. As HMOs are the only housing option for many people, the government recognises that it is vital that they are properly regulated.

Licensing is intended to make sure that:

- landlords of HMOs are fit and proper people, or employ managers who are
- each HMO is suitable for occupation by the number of people allowed under the license
- the standard of management of the HMO is adequate
- high risk HMOs can be identified and targeted for improvement.

Where landlords refuse to meet these criteria the council can intervene and manage the property so that:

- vulnerable tenants can be protected
- HMOs are not overcrowded
- councils can identify and support landlords, especially with regeneration and tackling antisocial behavior.

Do all HMOs have to be licensed?

No. In Mid Devon licensing will only apply to HMOs that are:

- three or more storeys high
- have five or more people in more than one household, and
- share amenities such as bathrooms, toilets and cooking facilities

How will it work ?

Anyone who owns or manages an HMO that must be licensed has to apply to the council for a license. The council must give a license if it is satisfied that:

- the HMO is reasonably suitable for occupation by the number of people allowed under the license
- the proposed license holder is a fit and proper person
- the proposed license holder is the most appropriate person to hold the license
- the proposed manager, if there is one, is a 'fit and proper person'
- the proposed management arrangements are satisfactory,
- the person involved in the management of the HMO is competent
- the financial structures for the management are suitable.

What does a fit and proper person mean?

The council will carry out checks to make sure that the person applying for the license is a fit and proper person. In deciding whether someone is fit and proper the council must take into account:

- any previous convictions relating to violence, sexual offences, drugs and fraud
- whether the proposed license holder has broken any laws relating to housing or landlord and tenant issues
- whether the person has been found guilty of unlawful discrimination
- whether the person has previously managed HMOs that have broken any approved code of practice.

It is advisable for the landlord or manager to be a member of a professionally recognised body, or an approved landlords association that is affiliated to the National Federation of Residential Landlords.

What is in a license ?

The license will specify the maximum number of people who may live in the HMO. It will also include the following conditions, which apply to every license:

- a valid current gas safety certificate, which is renewed annually, must be provided
- proof that all electrical appliances and furniture are kept in a safe condition
- proof that all smoke alarms are correctly positioned and installed
- each occupier must have a written statement of the terms on which they occupy the property, for example, a tenancy agreement.

Councils may also apply the following conditions:

- restrictions or prohibitions on the use of parts of the HMO by occupants
- a requirement that the condition of the property, its contents, such as furniture and all facilities and amenities, bathroom and toilets for example, are in good working order
- a requirement for specified works or repairs to be carried out within a particular timeframe
- a requirement that the responsible person attends an approved training course.

How long will it last ?

A license will normally last for a maximum of five years, although it can be for a shorter period.

How much will it cost ?

Landlords will have to pay a fee to cover the administration costs of the license procedure. This will vary depending on the amount of time and resources that are needed to satisfy all the licensing conditions.

Mid Devon District Council has decided that the fee will be £530.00 for the 5 year period of the license. This will be reduced to £450.00 if payment is made before 31 May 2006. Members of either the National or Local Landlords Association may also be entitled to a reduction.

Can the council refuse to license my property ?

Yes, if the property does not meet the conditions set out above and the landlord or manager is not a fit and proper person.

If a landlord fails to bring an HMO up to the required standard, or fails to meet the fit and proper person criteria, the Council can issue an Interim Management Order (IMO), which allows it to step in and manage the property. The owner keeps their rights as an owner. This order can last for a year until suitable permanent management arrangements can be made. If the IMO expires and there has been no improvement, then the Council can issue a Final Management Order. This can last up to five years and can be renewed.

What will happen then ?

If a landlord fails to bring an HMO up to the required standard, or fails to meet the fit and proper person criteria, the council can issue an Interim Management Order (IMO), which allows it to step in and manage the property. The owner keeps their rights as an owner.

This order can last for a year until suitable permanent management arrangements can be made. If the IMO expires and there has been no improvement, then the council can issue a Final Management Order. This can last up to five years and can be renewed.

Can I appeal ?

You may appeal if the council decides to:

- refuse a license
- grant a license with conditions
- revoke a license
- vary a license
- refuse to vary a license.

You must appeal to the Residential Property Tribunal, normally within 28 days:

Temporary exemption from licensing

If a landlord or person in control of a property intends to stop operating it as an HMO or reduces the numbers of occupants and can give clear evidence of this, then he or she can apply for a Temporary Exemption Notice. This lasts for a maximum of three months and ensures that a property in the process of being converted from an HMO does not need to be licensed. If the situation is not resolved, then a second Temporary Exemption Notice can be issued. When this runs out the property must be licensed, become subject to an Interim Management Order, or cease to be an HMO.

Are there any other penalties ?

It is an offence if the landlord or person in control of the property:

- fails to apply for a license for a licensable property or
- allows a property to be occupied by more people than are permitted under the license.

A fine of up to £20,000 may be imposed. In addition, breaking any of the license conditions can result in fines of up to £5,000.

Rent repayment orders

A tenant living in a property that should have been licensed, but was not, can apply to the Residential Property Tribunal to claim back any rent they have paid during the unlicensed period (up to a limit of 12 months). Councils can also reclaim any housing benefit that has been paid during the time the property was without a license.
