Dear Sirs,

RE: Proposed Homes for Hemyock

I am writing to express my concerns that you would consider building up to 195 homes in Hemyock under the new review. The area is of great beauty and the area would be spilit.

All the roads are too narrow and couldn't accommodate and more vehicles. Even now the roads are very often blocked. Hemyock has very few pavements with nowhere to build them. This makes it very dangerous for the local people even now.

The school, the Doctors Surgery and the sewers are now at breaking point. There is no work in the village for school-leavers. This envitably means people have to travel great distances to find work. Surely the houses should be built nearer the trains and motorways for easier access.

Hemyock had had its fair share of houses since the war.

Yours faithfully,

Brian Redwood
