Dear Sir,

I would like to place on record my objection to the massive development proposed for the area surrounding Motorway Junction 27. It is the wrong type of development in the wrong place and is far too large. If this development goes ahead it will totally ruin the "Gateway to Devon". What sort of first impression will this give to visitors, when the first thing they see upon arriving in Devon, by car or train, will be a massive area of undistinguished industrial buildings and large sprawling housing development. The only winners if this oversize development is allowed to go ahead will be the developers, who having taken huge profits and ruined Devon forever will then move on to desecrate another area.

Development should be centred upon existing towns and villages to help maintain them as vibrant locations with a good mix of housing, local business and entertainment.

Yours faithfully,

Mr. Graham Robinson,
